ABOUT THE HAMILTON POLICE MUSEUM

In 2010, the Hamilton Police Museum re-opened its door to the public at the historic Tisdale House (built circa 1825) located at 314 Wilson Street East, Ancaster, Ontario.

Inside the museum, are historic and educational archival materials relating to local police history that includes police uniforms, equipment, documents and photographs.

The museum is managed by the “Hamilton Police Historical Society and Museum Inc.,” Board of Directors with the support of the Hamilton Police Service and the Hamilton Police Services Board which results in our continued success.

The Hamilton Police Historical Society and Museum became Incorporated as a not-for-profit corporation in the Province of Ontario on September 16, 2019.

The Society operates a Tuck Shop called the “Call Box” which is located at the Hamilton Police Service, Central Station at 155 King William Street, Hamilton and sells various clothing, souvenirs and memorabilia with the logo and name of the Hamilton Police Service and the Society.

We are supported by a group of volunteers, most of whom are retired police members of the Hamilton Police Retirees Association, as well as others who share their time and expertise to conduct tours of the museum, assist at open houses, set up displays and operate the Tuck Shop.

Message from the President

On behalf of the Board of Directors of the Hamilton Police Historical Society and Museum Inc., I am pleased to present the 2021 Annual Report.

It's been another challenging year for everyone, as the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic continues to affect every aspect of our lives. We applaud all emergency response agency workers who continually provide essential day-to-day services for their communities and all others who provide supporting services. We think of those who have experienced illness or loss during this time.

Despite the ongoing challenges of the COVID-19 pandemic and another year of the museum closure, Board members continue to volunteer their time and work in support of the museum by meeting virtually and furthering our purpose of collecting, preserving, and managing artifacts and archival materials related to the Hamilton Police Service.

The Tuck Shop "Call Box" located at Central Station was closed for most of 2021 to ensure the safety of our volunteers; however, we continued to sell merchandise to support museum operations.

We produced our second Annual Report for 2020. The report is posted on the Hamilton Police Retirees Association website.

I continue to connect with members of the public by posting photos and articles about our local police history online through social media on Facebook, Twitter, and Instagram. Thank you to everyone who has engaged with us and those who have contributed articles and stories.

Thank you to our members and to those who have donated funds or artifacts in support of the museum. I also want to thank Hamilton Police Service, Chief Frank Bergen, and his management team and the Hamilton Police Services Board for their ongoing support of the museum.

On behalf of the Board of Directors, I am optimistic that in the year ahead the museum will reopen so we can welcome visitors back inside the museum and the Tuck Shop "Call Box".

Constable David Kerkhof
President and HPS Historian

Message from the Board of Directors

Due to the pandemic and public health guidelines in place in 2021, the museum remained closed to visitors. Despite the closure, there have been opportunities for the Board to continue their work and to maintain a connection with our members and the public through email, video conferencing and social media platforms to continue to promote public awareness and interest in our local police history.

The Tuck Shop “Call Box” has been closed for most of the pandemic; however, Michel Fauvelle and his volunteers continue to generate sales to support museum operations.

The Board of Directors held six meetings in 2021. Four virtual meetings: February 22, April 19, June 14, and September 20 and two in-person meetings: November 19 and December 3. In addition, we held our third Annual General Meeting virtually on November 1.

On November 19, the Board was invited to Central Police Station to meet with Chief Frank Bergen, Deputy Chief Ryan Diodati and Staff Sergeant Sara Beck to discuss the museum. This was the first in-person meeting for all Board members in two years. We discussed the status of the museum, enjoyed a luncheon and a tour of renovated spaces at Central Station. Below is a photo of the Board of Directors with Chief Bergen at Central Police Station.

Tisdale House - Since the November 19th meeting, the Board received a renewed facility agreement for Tisdale House, and we have learned about exterior maintenance work that will be completed at Tisdale House by the City of Hamilton in 2022.

Inside the Museum - The former Community Services office furniture has been removed to create a second display room. Both display rooms are being painted. There is much work ahead to reimagine the space and our displays within our limited finances.

Grants - We were successful in obtaining our first grant – the Heritage Organization Development Grant (HODG) - through the Ministry of Heritage, Sport, Tourism and Culture Industries. A second grant application has been made to the Ontario Trillium Foundation (OTF) Resilient Communities Fund.

Mohawk College Student’s Video - We reached out to the Mohawk College Broadcasting – Television & Communications Media program and arranged for media students from the winter 2021 semester to produce a video regarding the museum as part of their learning. The result is a video entitled: “An Introduction to Local Police History: Hamilton Police Historical Society and Museum” which has been posted to our Facebook page. We are grateful for the time and effort the students put into making this excellent production.

Collections - We continue to build our museum collections. During the closure we continued to receive donations from individuals, as well as numerous articles that were located during the Central Station reorganization.

New Software - In December we received a generous donation from Dave and Lynda Bowen to purchase a new collections management software program called PastPerfect. The software, designed by museum professionals, combines collection and contact management into an easy-to-use software package. The new software will help us to streamline our ability to input and search for artifacts.

Commemorative Street Light Pole Banners to Honor Hamilton's seven Fallen Officers and PSD Troy - The Hamilton Police Historical Society and Museum has agreed to purchase banners in cooperation with the Hamilton Police Retirees Association, Hamilton Police Association, and the Hamilton Police Service to be displayed during the month of May on streetlight poles in front of Central Police Station. The banner designs have been created by Graphics.

Annual Reporting - Our second Annual Report for 2020 was completed and produced in hard copy and electronic format with the assistance of the Hamilton Police Service, Graphics Branch. This year's Annual Report focusses on marking 100 years of marine and motorcycle patrols and the formation of the Hamilton Police Association which have contributed to Hamilton's rich police history.

Board Members - We wish to extend our appreciation and thanks to Terry Hill for his work and contributions as a Board member and supporter of the museum for many years; and to Staff Sergeant Greg Doerr for his time and support on the Board. We welcome Staff Sergeant Sara Beck and Lynda Bowen as new Board members.

With thanks - We are grateful for the ongoing support of our donors, members and partners during this time, and we thank all of those who continue to work with us to preserve Hamilton's local police history.

Thank you to our volunteers, most of whom are retired sworn and civilian members, as well as others who have shared their time and expertise to maintain the museum and operate the Tuck Shop.

Although nothing is etched in stone, we hope to open the museum to the public sometime in 2022 and resume working with volunteers in the future.

In 1919, Hamilton's Chief of Police, William Whatley proposed the formation of a Motorcycle Squad to improve the response time to crimes and assist in daily patrols. It was one of the earliest specialized units created by the Hamilton Police.

In 1921, the first Motorcycle Squad was formed with Officers:

Reginald Pryer
Ernest Edwards
James Bleakley

Sadly, Reg Pryer died in a motorcycle accident when he crashed into a pole at Sanford Ave. and King St. answering a “hurry-up” call with Officer McGregor. He was the first motorcycle officer killed in the Line of Duty in Canada.

James Bleakley resigned from the Hamilton Police Department to join the TH&B railway police. He served for 23 years retiring in 1963 as chief.

INSPECTOR OF OFFICERS BURVILLE

"Sort of unnerves you to see yourself in a picture taken years ago — this was in 1939. I believe the rank was created to give me promotion. Those were 45 grand years, I enjoyed them all, and I enjoyed working with the men of the Hamilton Police Department. Many have gone, but I remember them with affection."

Inspector of Officers in 1939. In 1946 he was made a Deputy Magistrate and Justice of the Peace for Ontario retiring in April 1957. He was a charter member of the Police Association and past president in 1942. He served on numerous boards and was involved with many community groups.

Harry Burville joined the Hamilton Police Department in 1912 as a Constable. In May 1916 he resigned to enlist with the 205th “Tiger” Battalion and went overseas later to serve with the Twelfth Brigade Machine Gun Company, Fourth Canadian Division. In 1919 he returned and was reinstated. He was promoted to Sergeant in 1926 and to the rank of

A local Hamilton newspaper article on September 13, 1924, written by C. B. Corrigan, called the motorcycle officers “winged policemen” and “gallant officers”. The ten men on the squad in order of seniority are: Ernest Edwards, Charlie Gent, John Rolfe, Douglas McGregor, David Green, George McLeod, Ernest Barrett, Fred Raynes, Alfred O. Jackson, and Robert Patton. Officer Edwards is “in direct command of the flying squadron, subject of course to the orders of Chief Coulter and Deputy Chief Sayer”.

There were six motorcycles in 1924. “Each is equipped with a side-car, so that two officers can be rushed at once to the scene of any crime or trouble. The officers are proud of their machines and regard them almost affectionately. They “groom” them as thoroughly as army dragoons do their horses. That is attested by their shiny appearance in the accompanying photo.” (See the 1924 photograph of the motorcycle squad on page 9.) “The squad is divided into three shifts for morning afternoon and night duty.” Officers work eight hour shifts 7 a.m. to 3 p.m., 3 p.m. to 11 p.m. and 11 p.m. to 7 a.m. Two officers work the day and afternoon shifts and four work the night shift. During the night shift each officer telephones the station every 20 minutes in case of a complaint or trouble. There were no specific beats; however, night shift officers patrol specific areas of the city. Motorcycle officers can respond faster than the patrolman or patrol wagon, which stops to pick up men, or when the patrol wagon is in the extreme west end.

Six of the ten motorcycle officers in 1924 served in the Canadian or British armies during the Great War. Five officers saw active service and received war decorations as follows: Officers Barrett, Jackson, McLeod, Patton and Raynes. Officer Rolfe enlisted but did not serve overseas.

Today, motorcycle patrols are diversified into specific services such as special events and traffic and most recently has been absorbed into the newly formed Traffic Safety Unit.

HAMILTON POLICE ASSOCIATION TURNS 100!

The first official meeting to form the Police Association of Hamilton occurred on July 20, 1921.

By Constable David Kerkhof, President of the HPHS&M

Why a Police Association?

In the early days of policing in Hamilton, pay and benefits were negotiated by the Chief Constable. There was no formal bargaining between the City and any other representation of the members of the Service.

As the 20th century progressed, labour organizations and unions were forming across the country to improve working conditions and pay. One of the most famous labour movements in Canada was the Winnipeg General Strike of 1919. In fact, at one point the entire Winnipeg Police Force joined the strike; the members were subsequently fired for doing so.

Why was there such a push at that time for labour rights? After WWI, struggling Canadian workers realised that employers were prospering on the backs of the workers, who were not receiving fair compensation. Adding to that, unemployment was high, and returning soldiers from WWI had difficulty finding jobs. Inflation was also high making food and housing unaffordable. Immigrants were especially hit hard by these circumstances. (Canadian Encyclopedia).

Hamilton had its fair share of labour issues as well; it was nicknamed the industrious “Ambitious City” in 1847 and lived up to that reputation over the 20th century. The famous Transit Workers Strike of 1906 was an early example of this.

This push for labour rights also became an issue for members of the Hamilton Police. Things especially began to change when soldiers returning from WWI joined the Police Force. The first push to unionize occurred in 1918. Hamilton Police may have been inspired by police in Winnipeg, who formed the Winnipeg City Policemen’s Federal Union in July of that year. It was affiliated with the Trades & Labour Congress of Canada as local Charter #40.

A headline on the local paper on September 17, 1918, read: “Police Want Charter for Union Here”. About 50 officers (out of about 75), signed and paid fees towards forming a police union. They had already sent a telegram to the Dominion Trades Congress in Quebec City to form the “Hamilton Federated Police Union”. The Trades Congress acknowledged receipt of applications from Hamilton and Windsor police to form unions. This, however, drew the ire of the Hamilton Police Commissioners and Police Chief William Whatley. After hearing that there had been a meeting to organize a union, Whatley stated: “When I heard of it, I ordered all who were present at the meeting to appear before me in my office. I then informed them that I was aware of what had taken place and advised them that a union organization would not be approved.”

Magistrate George Jelfs was quoted as saying that: “there will soon be legislation passed to make it illegal and an indictable offence for police officers to form a union.” He further added that a “union of police officers would not be tolerated here,” and, “I will never consent to arbitration.”

Representatives from the proposed union board requested a meeting with the Police Commissioners to explain the benefits of a union, but Jelfs refused. Things even got a little nasty when Jelfs called union organizers “Germans” and Irish “Sinn Feiners”. Remember that all of this was taking place as WW1 raged in Europe. Police members later called Jelfs out on this statement, but he denied making it.

The paper also said the members of the police were upset over a lack of raincoats. They wanted legal representation for any charges brought against officers, plus a salary increase and one day per week off (at that time officers had one day off per month). Chief Whatley had allegedly promised rain gear, but police members did not believe he would be true to his word until the War was over. He was very firm in reminding officers that coats were the property of the City and they would be shared among officers. His concern was the rising costs of uniforms. For example, he stated cloth in 1918 was $8 per yard and was going up to $12 per yard in 1919. Blue serge, which is what was used to make uniform tunics, cost $3.50 at the start of WWI and was up to $12.50 in 1918.

Police officers pushing for a union compared themselves to police in Toronto and Brantford, who were not only paid better but in Toronto also received a special “war bonus”. The local paper added: “The men say there would have been no need for a police association if they had decent treatment.”

Apparently because of the meeting of Police Commissioners on September 17, 1918, Hamilton Police officers were granted one day off per week.

Hamilton Mayor Charles Booker stated, “I don’t think we should ask the policemen to patrol their beats without raincoats, and one day a week off is a most reasonable request.” Even so, there was still talk of a police strike unless all grievances were addressed. Magistrate Jelfs was quoted as saying: “I don’t think the department would suffer in the least if all these men quit the service.” He later pointed to Saint John, New Brunswick, where a similar issue had occurred and the whole police force was dismissed:

“Much has been said about the “right” policemen have to organise on trade-union lines. So they have a legal right. But their Superior officers have the legal right also to dismiss them if they disobey orders. So much for the legal right.”

Not much was documented about further efforts to unionize that year. The following is an excerpt from the Hamilton Herald, a local newspaper, on January 15, 1919:

Hamilton Police Department Budget for 1919

“If the police force is not increased to its full complement of men, the police expenditures for the ensuing year will be even less than last year, when affairs were so economically managed that a balance of $3300 was left out of an appropriation of $150,000, that is, unless some unforeseen expenditures arise.”

“Chief Whatley’s estimate of this year’s appropriation is approximately $170,000. This is only $20,000 more than last year’s appropriation, which took care of three unexpected salary increases. Of this estimate $22,000 is to provide for the increase in the payroll that will naturally follow, if the police force is raised to full strength, as it is expected it will be when the ex-members of the department return from overseas and are taken back on the strength.”

“Last year’s uniforms cost $6500, this year the cost will be $8000, due to the increased price of cloth. Following the installation of a pumper on the steam-heating system, $840 was saved in coal bills. The pumper cost only about $275. It is expected that it will affect a material saving again this year.”

“Simple addition and subtraction shows that Chief Whatley will this year, if his plans work out, operate the department at actually less cost than last year, and at the same time add to instead of impairing its efficiency.”

On February 19, 1919, the Globe and Mail reported that the Toronto Police Union had applied for a Charter and that this move was “supported” by the union advocates of the Hamilton Police. The article further states that a Royal Commission had been appointed to look at the role and ramifications of police forming unions.

Back in Winnipeg, the new union’s membership voted overwhelmingly to join striking workers during Winnipeg’s 1919 General Strike. Though they ultimately remained on duty during the strike, their sympathies towards strikers was clearly evident by their lax conduct in maintaining law and order. The fallout from these actions resulted in mass firings.

News of this had no doubt travelled to Hamilton and may have influenced members here. Nonetheless, in November of 1919 Hamilton police were awarded salary increases as well as improvements to the Benefit Fund for Police Widows.

For whatever the reason, the idea of forming a union did not gain any more traction. The idea of forming an association, rather than a union came about in 1920. The October 21, 1920, edition of the Hamilton Spectator reported that police had met and planned to form an association. The Globe and Mail reported that police in Hamilton had planned to form an association that was to later be affiliated with an association in Toronto. They wanted to meet with City Council regarding salary increases and a change to the benefit fund. Those that were part of this movement were the pioneers who would eventually incorporate into a formal Hamilton Police Association (HPA) the following year.

The first official meeting to form The Police Association of Hamilton occurred on July 20, 1921. At this meeting, the Police Association was formed and duly incorporated. Elections were held; the first President was Sergeant Ernest May, Vice President was William MacLean, and Second Vice President was William MacBeath.

In 1945, The Police Association received a Provincial Charter. It was decided that year to combine celebrations of the Charter with recognition of the 25th anniversary of the founding of the Association and the 1920 pioneers who led the way. Celebrations took place at the Royal Connaught Hotel, where Mayor Sam Lawrence had the opportunity to present to his son, Detective Leonard Lawrence (on the right in the photo below), President of the Police Association, with the Provincial Charter. (Leonard Lawrence would become Chief of Police from 1952-1973.)

The Association handbook at that time stated: “The purpose of the Police Association is to unite the members of the Police Department fraternally; to provide them with legal assistance, hospital benefits, death benefits and numerous other forms of assistance; to uphold the honour of the police profession and to elevate the standards of the police service. Every member of the Hamilton Police Department is a member of this Association, and also a member of the Police Association of Ontario, the parent Association.”

Since that time, the Association has represented members in contract negotiations, pushing for improved benefits and salary, and defended members who have been charged.

In addition, the Hamilton Police Association (HPA) has been heavily involved in community programs. Contributions include donating vehicles to the Canadian Red Cross during WWII, affording Hamilton citizens the opportunity to enjoy concert artists perform at the Association Annual Concert for charities, participating in the Hamilton Police Minor Athletics Association, assisting in community charity work and assisting members with benevolence. The HPA has had a long history of assisting not only its own members, but the Hamilton community at large.

The HPA reached another milestone on January 4, 2021, when Detective Constable Jaimi Bannon became the first sworn female officer to lead the Association. The Association had previously been led by a woman, Joanne Englehardt, who was a civilian member of the Hamilton Police Service.

Detective Sergeant Ernie Barrett (1920 – 1955)

100 years ago, Ernie Barrett was one of the early members of the Hamilton police motorcycle squad and The Police Association of Hamilton.

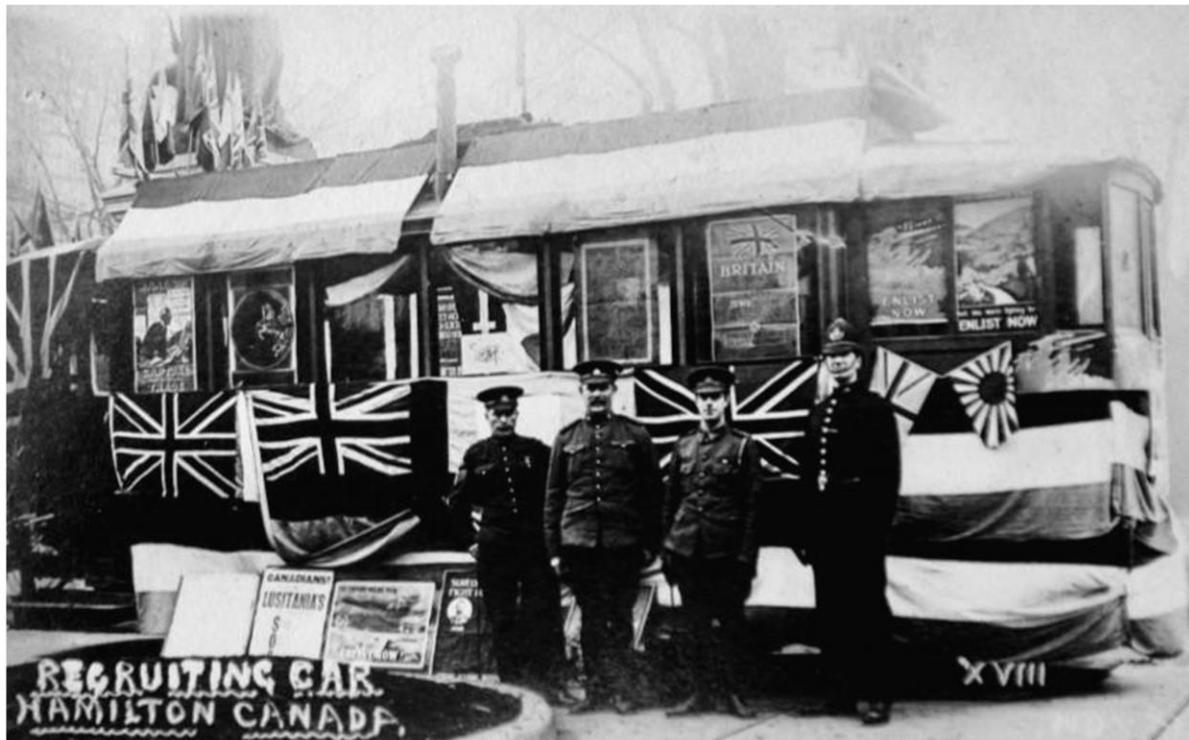

By Lynda Bowen, Retired Superintendent and Dave Bowen,
Retired Inspector, Hamilton Police Service

Ernie Walter Edward Barrett was born September 25, 1895, on Emerald Street North in Hamilton to Thomas Barrett and Jane Kirby. He was one of eight children born between 1886 and 1906. His father died in 1910 and his mother remarried.

Ernie was 19 years old at the start of WWI when he enlisted in Hamilton. In the photo below, Ernie posed for a “real time” postcard at the Recruiting Office on James Street North. Ernie is second from the right. We do not know the identify of the police officer. At the time of his enlistment, he had been in the Militia with the "13th Regiment" in Hamilton, which later became the Royal Hamilton Light Infantry.

Ernie fought with the Canadian Regiment (also known as the Fourth Battalion or the "Mad 4th") throughout the war. He fought at Ypres and Vimy Ridge. His grandson Albert reported that Ernie suffered gas attacks, a bullet wound in one leg, a bayonet in the other and shrapnel in his back at different times. During a battle a shell landed near him killing all his friends and burying him alive for eight hours. He finally dug himself out. He only spoke about the war with his granddaughter (Lynda Bowen), recounting the dirt and bugs, the cold and water and de-lousing stations everywhere.

In 1915 Ernie married Bridget Hyland in Kent, England. In 1916 Bridget gave birth to a daughter (Florence). Bridget died shortly after the birth and Ernie was left with a newborn.

Army records reveal that Ernie sailed to Canada with Florence, in September 1916. He arrived in Canada and gave the baby to his mother to raise. Ernie sailed back to England where he was on duty again in November 1916. His turn-around time was about one month in each direction.

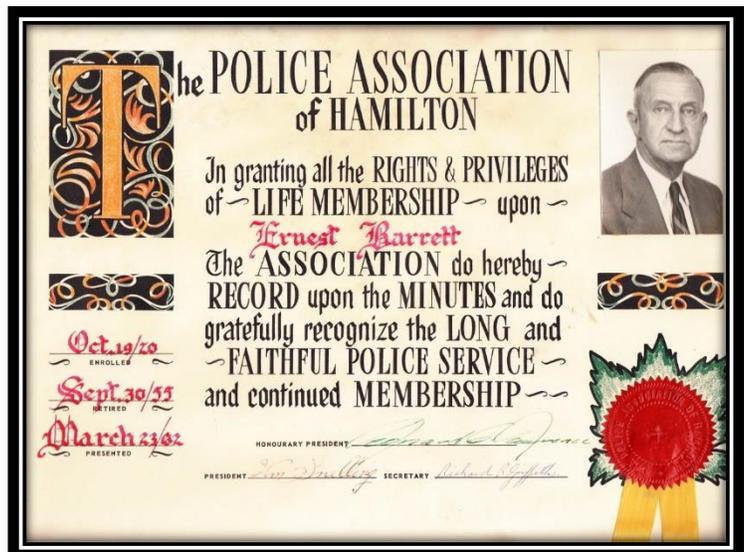

Ernie and Lucy Barrett at 1926 Police Association picnic.

In August 1918 Ernie married Lucy Mannering in Chichester England. When the war ended, Ernie and Lucy came to Hamilton. They had two children; Claude Cyril Ernest Barrett was born in 1920 and Albert Barrett was born in 1921.

Ernie worked at Stelco for a short period and then was hired by the Hamilton Police Service. He was one of the founding members of the Police War Veteran's Association and "Fourth Battalion Association".

For most of the 1920's Ernie drove a police motorcycle. At that time there no police cruisers. Officers responded to calls for service on foot or by motorcycle. That did not stop during the winter, they had to keep driving in all conditions which must have been something to see in the snow. They used a sidecar in the winter to help keep themselves upright. In the 1920's Ernie also became a member of the Hamilton Police Association which was founded in 1921.

In the 1930's Ernie was promoted to Detective and then to Detective Sergeant. He was an investigator in many high-profile police cases in Hamilton.

In 1944 an arsonist set fire to the Moose Temple on Catherine Street. Ten people died and forty-seven were injured. Twelve children were orphaned and three more lost one parent. Ernie and his partner Sam McGee arrested Arthur Dunsmoor who was sentenced to prison for life.

OFFICERS ESCORT ACCUSED MAN—Detective Sam Magee, left, and Detective-Sergeant Ernest Barrett, right, are seen leaving police headquarters to-day with Douglas Dunsmoor, centre, after he appeared before Magistrate H. A. Burbidge on a charge of murder arising out of the Moose Temple fire tragedy, May 24, when Mrs. May Martin was burned to death and nine others suffered burns and injuries that proved fatal. Dunsmoor was remanded for preliminary hearing of the charge June 16.

In 1946 Ernie met Evelyn McLean Dick when she sat on the corner of his desk to report her husband John Dick missing. Quite by chance Evelyn knew Ernie's son Claude (who was also a police officer) from elementary school. (Evelyn Dick was a murderer in one of Hamilton's famous cases. She was acquitted of the murder John Dick.)

In April 1951, a man was murdered in northern Ontario and his car was stolen and sold in Niagara Falls. Ernie and his partners arrested Lloyd Weiss at the Wentworth Arms Hotel in Hamilton with some of the deceased's property. He was found guilty in October 1951 and hung in January 1952.

In the Nominal Roll for 1951 Ernie was listed as one of three Sergeants of Detectives with Stan Gaylard and J. Wittun. There were also four Detective Sergeants (J. Freeborn, Sam McGee, Clarence Preston and A. Robson) and ten Detectives.

Ernie worked until 1955 when he retired. He then worked at the Wentworth County Sheriff's Office for another ten years and then retired again in 1965. He died in February 1975.

A Century of Marine Policing

By Constable David Kerkhof, President of the HPHS&M and HPS Historian

2021 marks a century of marine policing in the City of Hamilton.

In many ways, Hamilton grew as a city because of its location at the western end of Lake Ontario, first known as the Head-of-the-Lake. In the early years there was no canal for larger vessels to enter Hamilton's harbour. Beginning in 1823, engineers started building the Burlington Bay Canal. Workers dug a channel through a natural sandbar on the eastern end of the harbour. The canal was completed in 1832, one year prior to the incorporation of the Town of Hamilton. The sandbar is now known as the Beach Strip and the trench is known as the Burlington Canal over which now sits the Skyway and Lift Bridges.

As Hamilton Harbour grew to become one of Canada's largest and busiest ports; so did its need for public safety and security in policing.

Retired Constable Darryl N. Buckle wrote about the history of marine policing in the 1986 Ontario Police Journal (vol 3, number 3):

"A three-hundred-foot-wide trench had finally been dug across a natural sand bar, to join Lake Ontario and Burlington Bay, thus creating a fine new canal which would allow easy access by quite large ships into the Bay for the first time. As a historic side note, Burlington Bay is now designated on all maps as Hamilton Harbour but was originally called Lake Geneva before becoming Burlington Bay. In 1846 the "bay" became legally a part of Hamilton by an incorporating statute."

The shipping canal allowed for trade, development and economic growth for the new City of Hamilton. The Hamilton Harbour Commission (HHC) came into existence on April 1, 1912, through an Act of Parliament. (HHC was replaced by the Hamilton Port Authority in 2001). The HHC, an administrative organization, was created by the city fathers and was empowered to borrow and spend money, acquire, own, sell or lease property and generally attend to the business of what was fast becoming a bustling port.

The first Chief of the Hamilton Harbour Police, the late Howard Sager, is standing in a dinghy used for shallow water work, such as body recovery. Cst. Jack Bye is kneeling in front. Photo circa 1955.

Retired Constable Darryl N. Buckle further wrote:

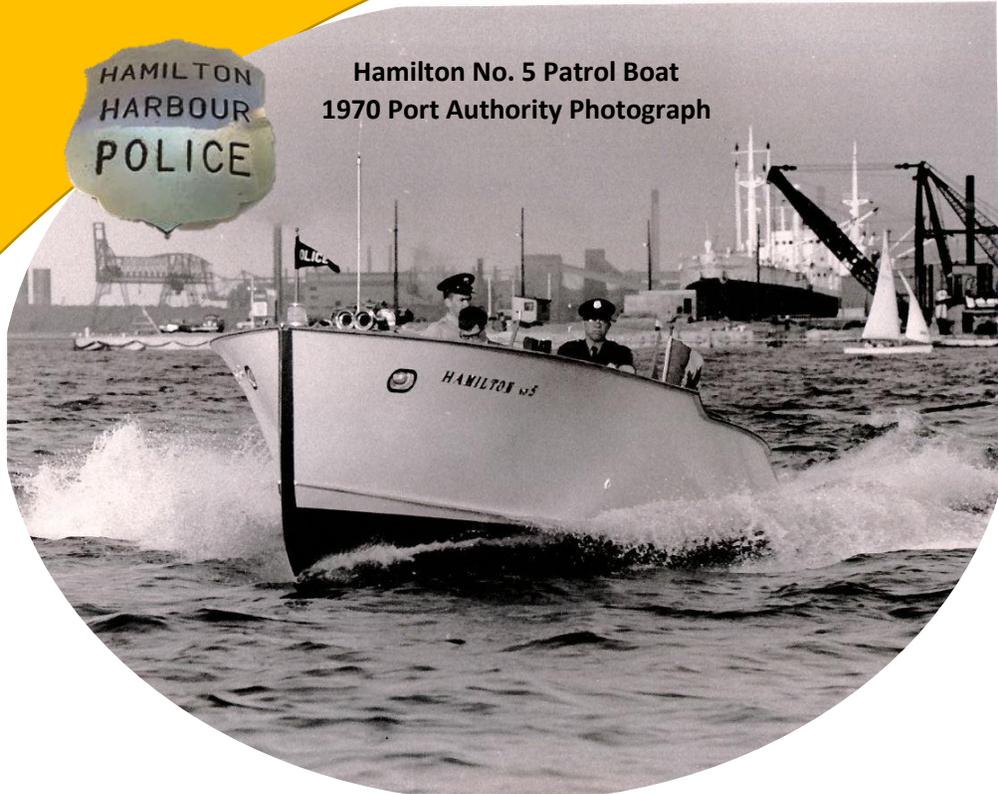

"In 1921, after two young ladies were drowned while canoeing on the Bay, the Commission created the Hamilton Harbour Police and appointed Howard Sager as the first Chief. More men were hired, a power launch was purchased, and the Harbour Police were in business. The year 1938 saw a subsidiary branch of the Hamilton Harbour Police formed, designated the "Shore Patrol". Jack Bye was the first member, by the way. The two branches of the Harbour Police were combined under a new Chief, Robert {Bob} Malcolmson when he assumed command in 1969. Bob left the service to become the head of the Law and Security department at Mohawk College two years later and Chief William (Bill) Bailey (photo far left) was appointed in his place; he in turn was replaced by Chief Frank Smith (photo second from left) who remained in command of the Force until February 7, 1986, when the Hamilton Harbour Police ceased to exist.

"The strength of the Harbour Police was 17 members, although at one time there were 25 members during a period of time which may now be regarded as its prime. In September 1977 issue of PORTFOLIO, published by the Hamilton Harbour

Commission, may be found the following description of the Force; "The HHC Police Force has total responsibility for Harbour security, both winter and summer. The 23 men and 2 officers are also responsible for life saving, pleasure craft licensing, water safety, patrol duty, radio communications and dozens of other duties on a year-round basis. The budget for equipment, training costs and payroll will be priced in excess of $500,000 for the current year. It is interesting to note that the entire police budget is provided by the HHC. "

Hamilton No. 5 Patrol Boat
1970 Port Authority Photograph

The HHC Police once had five patrol boats patrolling the Harbour. Now only three former HHC police boats remain:

No. 5 is in private hands in Hamilton. No. 4 is in Minnesota. No. 3 was destroyed by Hurricane Hazel in 1954. No. 2 sits in storage at the Harbour Authority. Restoring No. 2 was the focus of an article in the Hamilton Spectator in March 2012.

HHC Police patrolled the waters at the height of the prohibition days when "rum-runners" used high-powered boats to move liquor across Lake Ontario for the likes of Ben Kerr and Rocco Perri. Harbour Police were sworn as Special Constables and didn't carry firearms. Initially, they were trained in-house but began attending the Ontario Police College in 1962.

The two units that were amalgamated in 1969 as the Harbour Police and remained that way until February 22, 1986, when the Hamilton

Harbour Commission disbanded the Harbour Police. Economic constraints for the HHC were such that it could no longer support a budget for its own police force. Thus, the responsibility for policing the Hamilton Harbour became the responsibility of the Hamilton-Wentworth Regional Police Service. The policing responsibility now included not only the Hamilton Harbour, but also Cootes Paradise and those parts of the cities of Hamilton and Stoney Creek which extend into Lake Ontario. As commercial trade, vessel traffic, smuggling, and particularly leisure water activity increased, so did a greater need for police presence in and around the bodies of waters in our region, including those found in conservation areas.

The boundaries of responsibility temporarily increased in 1996 when the Halton Regional Police partnered with our Marine Unit to provide a more complete service. It operated with four full-time members and a varying number of seasonally posted officers.

On January 1, 2001, the Hamilton-Wentworth Regional Police and its former Municipalities merged to become the Hamilton Police Service.

In April 2008, the Halton detachment of the Marine Unit moved from Hamilton's base of operation located in Hamilton Harbour, to their new home at Bronte Harbour. With the move, the Hamilton and Halton Marine Unit partnership ended but the Units continue to work together to provide improved coverage of the waters along the shores of Hamilton, Burlington, and Oakville.

The Unit gained fame in April 2011 when it rescued a group of high school rowers who were caught in a freak storm. The members received the Canadian Safe Boating Counsel "Rescue of the Year" award, the first time this award was given to a professional organization.

In August 2019, the Marine Unit moved to a temporary facility located at 110 Harbour Front Drive as the City was developing the Harbour Front where the old facility existed. The old building was torn down the following year.

Today, the Marine Unit operates with four full-time police officers and six "spare" officers for vacation coverage and emergencies. The Marine Unit actively patrols from mid-April until mid-November. In the off-season, the units perform ice rescue and traffic enforcement. In 2016, the Marine Unit joined the other Units of Support Services Division by adding a Unit Patch to their uniforms.

At present, the Marine Unit operates two patrol boats for regular patrol as well as for search and rescue operations. They are also utilized during emergencies and to conduct safety checks of local recreational boats. In 2016 the Hamilton Police Service purchased a 28-foot Zodiac Pro 870 RHIB (rigid-hulled inflatable boat).

ARGO amphibious

equipped with twin supercharged 300 hp Mercury Verado motors. In 2019, the Marine Unit also acquired a 12-meter (39 foot) Metalcraft Marine Interceptor. An ARGO amphibious vehicle is used to patrol the sandy shore and to patrol and perform rescues on ice.

The Marine Unit is an example of how diverse policing operations have become with the large influx of non-commercial boats and the challenges of effectively patrolling large areas.

Marine Unit operations will relocate to a new state-of-the-art facility being constructed on Harbour Front Drive.

There it will serve the needs of the city, it's harbour and the Head-of-the-Lake as it continues to provide enforcement, search and rescue operations, and marine safety education for the public.

In Remembrance of Chief of Police Brian John Mullan

Brian Mullan served as the sixth Chief of Police of the Hamilton-Wentworth Regional Police Service, created by amalgamating Hamilton and suburban forces in 1974.

Brian grew up on the east Mountain and was the son of Scottish immigrants, Jack and Florence Mullan. His father worked at Stelco, and his mother worked at the Royal Bank. He graduated from Barton Secondary School and took business administration at Mohawk College. Later, he took administration courses at McMaster University and the University of Toronto.

Brian spent 35 years (1974 - 2009), as a proud Hamilton Police Officer. He worked as a Uniformed Officer, and later in the Youth office, Fraud office, Court Services and Human Resources. He was promoted through the ranks to Staff Sergeant, Inspector, to Superintendent of the Mountain Station in 1998 and then to Deputy Chief in 2001; ultimately rising to Chief of Police in 2003, where he served for 6 years, retiring in 2009.

His legacy includes increasing the number of officers in the downtown, boosting the hiring of visible minorities and creating the four-horse Mounted police unit. He oversaw operations for the 1996 Grey Cup and Days of Action protest and pioneered the use of new civil forfeiture laws in shutting down the notorious Sandbar crack hotel.

He graduated from the FBI National Academy in 1994, received the Ontario Police Exemplary Service Medal in 1995 and was appointed to the Order of Merit for Police Forces in 2007.

After his retirement from policing, he served on the Parole Board of Canada and the provincial Judicial Approval Advisory Committee. He was a member of many organizations and board of directors including, the FBI National Academy Associates, Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police, Ontario Association of Chiefs of Police, and Hamilton Health Sciences.

Brian passed away on July 19, 2021, at 67 years of age after a brave and courageous battle with cancer. Brian is survived by his wife Loretta, daughters Ashley and Stephanie, two grandchildren and his brother, Wayne.
